PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

The New Jersey Hospital Association (NJHA), Seton Hall University and the ACHE chapters of New Jersey and New York invite you to a valuable series of presentations. The goal of this series is to provide early- and mid-career healthcare managers with the opportunity to learn from the experiences of several of our N.J. healthcare leaders – CEOs, former CEOs, NJHA board chairmen and a past AHA Chairman. Their vast years of experience and knowledge will provide you with a meaningful dialogue from true healthcare leaders. They were involved in transforming our N.J. hospitals into integrated health-

...meaningful dialogue from true healthcare leaders... As healthcare professionals you've obtained your schooling, your degrees and on-the-job training. Now is the time to hear from a group of healthcare leaders who have a wealth of experiences and lessons learned that they want to share with you.

Part of each two-hour program will allow for comments from our faculty and the rest of the time for questions from the attendees.

Some of the questions addressed will include:

- What career advice do you have for someone who wants to be promoted to a senior healthcare leadership position?
- What do healthcare leaders pay too little attention to?
- As you move up the hierarchy to more advanced positions, what should you pay particular attention to?
- What was one of your most helpful lessons learned in respect to leadership?
- What do you see as the top one or two things today's healthcare leaders need to address in order to be successful?
- How do you balance the competitive aspect of today's healthcare environment with the need for collaborative industry-wide advocacy such as New Jersey's charity care underfunding?
- What do you look for in an applicant for a leadership position?
