Program description

The Nurse Manager's role is ever evolving, attempting to keep pace and adapt to the many challenges the role presents is no easy task even for the most experienced leaders. Demands both internally from an organizational perspective coupled with challenges arising from a newly reformed healthcare delivery system can be daunting. According to the American Organization of Nurse Executives, the vacancy rate among nurse managers is over eight percent. The primary goal of ONENJ is to provide education and mentorship to developing nurse leaders. This program will help early career nurse managers and aspiring nurse managers/leaders understand the connection between the organization's strategic plan and its effects on the manager's department or unit. It will address the process for developing a business plan and how to interpret and use data and communicate effectively with team members.
