New Jersey AHRQ Safety Program for Long Term Care: HAI/CAUTI Learning Session 1

New Jersey Hospital Association, Princeton, NJ

July 14, 2015

Registration: 8:30 a.m.

Program: 9 a.m. – 4 p.m.

Seminar: EDU 1545

Location: NJHA Conference and Event Center
760 Alexander Road, Princeton, NJ

Fee: $40/person

Research shows that the rate of hospital-acquired infections (HAIs) in long term care facility (LTCF) residents is between one and three million annually in the United States. This contributes to nearly 400,000 deaths per year. In addition, re-hospitalizations from LTCFs are increasing, with urinary tract infections being the second most common reason. This program emphasizes evidence-based infection prevention practices and antibiotic stewardship to help eliminate catheter-associated urinary tract infections (CAUTIs).

OBJECTIVES:

1. Understands the project and how team efforts will align with project aims

2. Understands steps necessary to reduce the utilization of urinary catheters and decrease CAUTI rates

3. Describes how the culture of resident safety can influence the outcomes of infection prevention

4. Demonstrates the use of quality improvement tools to improve patient safety

5. Understands how program progress will be measured and the importance of data submission and monitoring

6. Understands the potential project challenges and support that will be provided by your organizational lead and national project team

7. Describes the planned implementation of this project in your organization.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Nurses in long term care facilities, clinical and administrative staff and infection prevention professionals.
