

OBJECTIVES:

1. Define the key features of the new Comprehensive Care Joint Replacement model
2. Review examples of possible savings opportunities
3. Demonstrate how to estimate the potential effect CCJR will have on practice patterns and revenue cycle.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Chief executive officers, chief financial officers, chief administrative officers, chief medical officers, additional c-suite staff, medical staff directors, orthopedic administrators, reimbursement staff.

FACULTY:

PAMELA PELIZZARI, MPH, is a healthcare consultant with the New York office of Milliman. She specializes in the development and management of episode-based payment methodologies. She joined the firm in 2014. Pelizzari has a broad background in integrated delivery system administration and healthcare payment reform. She has worked in both clinical and payer settings and has experience in alternative risk contracting strategies.

Pelizzari has particular expertise in analysis of healthcare claims and the development of episode-based payment definitions and benchmarking methodologies. She also has experience implementing both prospective and retrospective payment methodologies, including developing gainsharing methodologies, claims adjudication techniques, and quality monitoring programs.

Prior to joining Milliman, Pelizzari served as a senior technical advisor at CMS. She was responsible for developing and implementing novel payment methodologies to transform healthcare delivery and payment nationwide. Pelizzari played a key role in designing the national Bundled Payments for Care Improvement initiative, with thousands of participants nationally. She also led the development of an oncology episode-based payment model as well as other specialty physician-focused bundled payment models. Previously, Pelizzari worked at an academic medical center, building consensus for redesigning care delivery among diverse stakeholders including physicians, administrators, and patient advocates.
