OVERVIEW:

Attendees should be prepared to learn about current and future developments in the laws surrounding medical marijuana. Changes to state medical and recreational marijuana laws nationwide present new areas of study, innovation and legal issues that affect healthcare providers in New Jersey and beyond.

Legal practitioners will be prepared to learn about current and future developments in the law surrounding medical marijuana. Changes to state medical and recreational marijuana reform. Areas of focus include:

- Recent developments in New Jersey's Medical Marijuana Laws
- State reforms in the face of existing federal laws
- Implementation measures and risks for hospitals, health systems and healthcare providers.

FACULTY:

Jeff Brown

N.J. Department of Health

Assistant Commissioner for Medicinal Marijuana

Jeff Brown is an assistant commissioner at the N.J. Department of Health, overseeing the newly elevated Division of Medicinal Marijuana. He has years of experience in health policy, government affairs, communications and both advocacy and electoral campaigns. In his career, Jeff has worked extensively on the passage and implementation of the Affordable Care Act, particularly the creation of health insurance exchanges and the expansion of Medicaid. He has led an association of community-based providers to implement innovative new payment models in Medicaid, and has fought to expand access to healthcare in New Jersey's urban communities by developing sustainable financing policies.

Anne M. Davis, Esq.

Principal Attorney

Law Offices of Anne M. Davis

Over the past 10 years, Anne Davis has pursued marijuana law reform espousing marijuana's qualities and a need for change in the law. She has traveled the country from coast to coast learning and researching marijuana law and policy, cultivation methods and technology and every facet of the industry, from outdoor California farms to indoor warehouse grows to small boutique cultivator/dispensary shops. She served as the chair of the Board and former executive director of NORML New Jersey (National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws), a member of NORML's Legal Committee and one of the founding members of the NORML Women's Alliance. She currently serves as national counsel to the American Cannabis Nurses Association and continues to present at workshops and seminars nationwide as an advocate for cannabis law reform.
