Seminar | EDU 1952

OVERVIEW:

Surveys in healthcare are critical to healthcare organizations seeking licensure, recognition and accreditation. Utilizing recent Joint Commission data, participants will gain a better understanding of hot-button issues in the area of licensure surveys. Attendees will receive first-hand guidance from speakers from the Joint Commission and New Jersey Department of Health – covering how to best prepare for inspections along with management and compliance techniques that are critical to providers; shared goals of improving quality and safety in patient care.

Specific topics for discussion include:

- A refresher on facility types regulated by NJDOH
- An overview of approval and standard surveys – expectations and processes
- Complaint investigations
- State surveys versus federal surveys
- Activities occurring after an inspection
- Identifying survey areas which constitute a risk to accreditation
- How recent Joint Commission data impacts survey activity
- Practical steps to take when confronted with accreditation and survey issues

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Attorneys, compliance officers, quality directors, CEO's and other executives

FACULTY:

Stefanie Mozgai, BA, RN, CPM

Assistant Commissioner

New Jersey Department of Health, Division of Health Facility Survey and Field Operations

Mozgai is the assistant commissioner of the New Jersey Department of New Jersey of Health's Division of Health Facility Survey and Field Operations. A 20-year veteran of the Department, Mozgai is responsible for ensuring compliance with state and federal requirements, including the overall management of the survey and certification process for more than 2,000 licensed and certified facilities – comprised of hospitals, long term care facilities and ambulatory care services. She also serves as president-elect of the Association for Health Facility Survey Agencies, a non-profit organization established to provide a forum for healthcare regulatory agency directors and managers nationwide.

Lisa Diehl Vandecaveye, Esq.
